*) The Japanese names of the clonal garden forms of P. serrulata enumerated here and appended to the binomial should not be considered as forming combinations with that binomial; this is indicated by their citation in quotation marks and by being printed in a different type. The first eight clonal names belong to typical P. serrulata while "Amanogawa" and the following belong to P. s. var. Lannesiana. For a discussion of the question of the nomenclature of clones, see Jour. Arnold Arboretum, 10: 65-67 (1929). By several authors, however, the clonal names have been treated as forming combinations with the botanical names; these combinations are cited here as synonyms and the references given under the name of the author followed by "op. cit." refer to the following publications of the respective authors: Wilson, Cherries Japan (1916); Miyoshi in Jour. Coll. Sci. Tokyo, 34, 1: 175 pp., 23 t. (1916); Koehne in Mitt. Deutsch. Dendr. Ges. 1917(26): 1-65 [1918]; Russell in U. S. Dept. Agric. Circ. 313 (Orient. Fl. Cherries) (1934). * Houttuyn's citation might lead one to assume that the name Rhus sinense was published as a binomial by Ellis, but this is not the case; in the two places where Ellis deals with this plant, namely in Philos. Trans. Royal Soc. Lond. 49,2: 870, t. 25, fig. 5 (1757) and 50,1: 447, t. 17 (1758), the words Rhus sinense form the beginning of a polynomial and read "Rhus sinense foliis alatis foliolis oblongis acuminatis ad basin subrotundis et dentatis". Also Rehder, Bradley Bibliography, 2: 413 (1912) cites the name, as Houttuyn did, and for the publication of 1758, he further cites "Rhus glandulosa" which is a mistake, apparently caused by a note in his manuscript, that the Ellis plant is identical with Ailanthus glandulosa.

Engelm., in 1850, listed it as "var." followed by a descriptive phrase; Watson, in 1878, called it "var. pubens" and credited the name to Engelm.; Engler, in 1883, called it Rh. pubescens Engelm., changing the epithet probably by slip of the pen from pubens to pubescens and cites the name as a synonym under Rhus Toxicodendron a. vulgaris a2. volubilis DC. (l. c.); Barkley in Ann. Missouri Bot. Gard. 24: 420, 431 (1937) cites the name under Toxicodendron quercifolia [Michx.] Robins. & Fern. and Lindheimer's specimen under Toxicodendron radicans where it belongs according to the specimen in the Gray Herbarium; Fernald considers it a distinct variety: Rhus radicans var. pubens (Engelm. ex Wats.) *) The citation of Nuttallia canadensis as having been published in 1821 is apparently a mistake. In his description of Nemopanthus with the new combination N. canadensis (l. c.) De Candolle states that the plant flowered in April, 1819, and that he had a drawing made under the name of Nuttallia. No report, however, was published in the first part of the Mémoires issued in 1821. The first description is the one published in the second part of the Mémoires issued in 1822 as stated above. This report and the following reports, the later ones partly by Alphonse de Candolle, were reprinted under the title: Notices sur les plantes rares et nouvelles. . . . The drawing made by Ampsach in 1821 was not published until 1829 (with twenty-three other drawings by Heyland) in the work cited above where the combination Nuttallia [sic] canadensis appears as a synonym.

(1947), except f. aurea, to four different species and one hybrid. An account of this treatment follows here, including J. sphaerica to J. davurica var. Parsonsii (p. 649-652). An evaluation of the classification of these Junipers as proposed by Melle is not possible without further careful study and must be left to a future monographer of this group. The new names and the whole arrangement is cited here as published by Van Melle.

INDEX

The letters a and b following the page number indicate first and second column.

Valid names are in roman, those of families in roman small capitals and those of groups above families in capitals.

Synonyms are in italics, or if identical with a valid name, are listed under it with the page number in italics following the reference to the valid name; e. g. Rosa cinnamomea, 308a, 307b, 308b.

Subdivisions of families are cited in the general alphabetical order followed by the name of the family in parenthesis; e.g. Spiraeoideae (Rosaceae).

Subdivisions of genera in the form of nouns are listed in general alphabetical order, followed in parenthesis by the name of the genus to which they belong; e. g. Hulthemia (Rosa).

Subdivisions of genera consisting of adjectives in the plural number follow the generic name and are preceded by the sign §. Rarely are they adjectives in the singular number (which is not according to Art. 26 of the Rules) and pertain to the term series, as in Rubus Ser. Hostiana Tratt. (see foot-note on p. 284b and 296a) or to the generic name as in Acer § Trinervium (see p. 424a) and in Rhododendron § Ponticum (see foot-note p. 504b).

Subdivisions of species appear all in one alphabetical order without indication of rank; polynomials are cited as published: e. g. Thuja occidentalis erecta viridis. Polynomial combinations, that is, combinations with indication of categories are reduced to ternary combinations (see International Rules of Botanical Nomenclature, Art. 28); terms like typicus, genuinus, originarius, normalis, vulgaris, following a subdivisional epithet are not separated from it, since without that epithet, they do not have the intended meaning; see Art. 4 and 28.

Binomials treated as subspecies are listed as ternary combinations followed by the initial letter of the genus in parenthesis, e. g. Salix nigra * * S. amygdaloides Anders. = S. nigra amygdaloides (S.) and Abies Webbiana β. A. Pindrow Brandis = A. Webbiana Pindrow (A.).

In hybrids designated by a formula, the names of the parent species are arranged in alphabetical order and the formula is listed under the first name, if not published in alphabetical order, they are cited as published with an alternate citation in alphabetical order as synonym; if the hybrid has received a binary name, the formula is treated as a synonym. If there is no binary name, the formula constitutes the valid designation of the hybrid.

Subdivisions of a hybrid formula consisting of a varietal epithet are separated by a colon from the formula to distinguish them from varietal epithets belonging to the immediately preceding binomial; e. g. Tilia americana × platyphylla: neglecta (Spach) V. Engl. where neglecta is a subdivision of the formula and e. g. Malus baccata × pumila var. Niedzwetzkyana where Niedzwetzkyana is a subdivision of Malus pumila.

Orthographic variants of generic names are referred to the original and accepted spelling, e. g. Pirus = Pyrus, Xanthoxylum = Zanthoxylum.

Slight changes in the ending of adjectives in binary and higher combinations owing to change in gender, and double or single "i" in genitive endings are listed under the accepted spelling. Likewise, changes in the connecting vowels of adjectives as albo-variegatus and albi-variegatus, are not listed separately; also changes of certain vowels or consonants as sylvestris and silvestris, Omorica and Omorika, davuricus, dauricus and dahuricus are not listed as distinct names, unless the difference is such as to remove these epithets to a distant place in the alphabetical sequence where they are referred to the correct spelling by cross reference.
